Seen & Heard Around MURRAY

More folks out yesterday just driving around enjoying a beautiful April day.

The lake covered up with fishermen too.

The crapple apparently are biting, with several nice strings being reported.

A Woodland Tragedy.

A hawk apparently had caught a Cardinal and feasted on a rotten log. Brilliant red plumage scattered over a square yard area and downy under feathers clinging here and there on bark.

Lucky Strike had the best slogan yet, "Nature in the raw is seldom mild".

That is the way it is supposed to be however and Nature can keep the balance better than anyone else. Whenever man tries to "protect" this or that in a given area (almost extinct wild life excluded) then this balance is thrown out of kilter.

A tortoisene. Out west the wolves were eating the deer. Some brain decides to kill off the wolves then

Now Your Taxes Are Not Going Up, Just More Will Be Taken

By JOHN PIERSON
United Press International
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Nobody's taxes actually will be going up or down next month — it will only seem that way.

For, beginning May 1, the nation's employers acting at the direction of the government, will begin taking more money or less money out of your pay envelope.

Less Withheld

If you're earning less than those amounts, chances are that less money will be withheld for taxes the first payday after April 30.

Under the new system of payroll withholding — which is how wage-earners pay most of their federal income taxes — people will get on to more of a pay-as-you-go basis with the tax collector. Taxes withheld from paychecks will come

In general, you can expect more to be taken out if you're single and earning over $50 a week; ditto if you're a married man with two children earning more than $140.

Harry Suiter Dies Sunday Afternoon

Harry Suiter of Murray Route One died Sunday about 10:30 a.m. He was 65 years of age and his death was reported to be due to a self-inflicted gun shot wound, according to Max Churchill, Calloway County Coroner.

The body of Mr. Suiter was discovered in the yard of the homeplace of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Suiter, by his son-in-law, Mac Pitts, who had gone to look for him after Suiter had failed to pick up his wife following the church services Sunday at noon.

Reports are that Suiter drove his car into the driveway and it is assumed that he got out of the car and sat down on a grassy spot in the yard. Churchill said death was from a 12-gauge single barrel shot gun that had been triggered by a yardstick. The fatal wound entered Suiter under his chin, Churchill said.

Suiter was reported to have taken his wife to church that morning and was seen at the local drug store about 10 a.m., but reportedly told someone he was talking to that he had to hurry home. After he failed to pick Mrs. Suiter up at church, she called her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Mac Pitts, and they went to look for him. Mrs. Pitts discovered the body about 12:30 p.m. Death was thought to have occurred about 10:30 a.m.

The deceased is survived by his wife, Mrs. Nettie Gardner Suiter of Murray Route One; two daughters, Mrs. June Gingles of Nashville, Tenn., and Mrs. Judy Pitts, who resides in Murray; five grandchildren, Chris, Carlos, Mark, Jane, and Ralph Gingles, all of Nashville, Tenn.

Theologian Is Very Blunt With Points

By LOUIS CASSELL

United Press International

At long last, a prominent theologian has said it out loud and in blunt language any layman can understand:

Christianity is being betrayed from within by some clergymen whose only God is "being stressed of the times."

"This is the age of the silent," said Dr. Robert E. Fitch, dean of the Pacific School of Religion, Berkeley, Calif., in a cover article for this week's issue of Christian Century magazine.

People go to church hoping to hear the good news of the Christian gospel. Instead they are apt to get a dose of "God-stress" theology from a preacher who's determined to prove he's right up to the minute with the latest facts.

"If we should dare to pass judgment on this well-situated Christian," said Dr. Fitch, "it would be our most pertinent single objection."

Let Trifles Go

"Let go such trifles as that he debates the deity, debates the Church, disintegrates the church, explodes a Christian ethic: About such things how could he care less? There is yet an objection to be lodged against his performance, and it can be expressed only by a plain American term: The whole act is a phony."

The phony act is a phony," Dr. Fitch, with the protest that the so-called "new theology" is radical, original and profound.

On the contrary, he says, "it is the very genius of superficiality—a kind of theological yellow journalism that debases up all redoubt before our nostrils, the latest and hottest sensation in sex, sin, atheism, the multiversity, the secular city. The eternal is entombed beneath the topical and the trivial."

Moreover, he isn't even sure. Despite his passion for being contemporary at all costs, the well-acquainted Christian is merely reflecting a philosophy which was already old in the 19th century, when it went by the more honest name of atheism.

"It is amusing to hear certain theologians begin to trumpet today about the death of God, which regular philosophers thought they had pretty well established half a century ago," says the noted seminary dean. "But this message is now out of date. Our culture has already moved on to the very opposite condition—the death of Godlessness."

Except within the churches, where it seems to have won a belated beachhead, atheism is no longer a viable movement in modern society. In the world at large, it is being, not gaining, adherents.

Failed Completely

And this is why the self-styled "Christian radicals" have failed miserably in their proclaimed purpose of making Christianity "meaningful" to the contemporary secular world. They are not, as they fondly think, ahead of the secular world. "In its own terms, they are far behind it, and they have nothing to say to it of any significance."

Dr. Fitch concludes that the "new theology" is a weird product of false sophistication.

"The sophistication is false because the true sophistication keeps clear of critical finalities and insists on discontinuities among 'the latest things,' choosing what he will accept and what he will reject." He does not fall into the sophomoric error of equating novelty with value, because he knows that "there are abiding truths in our human heritage."

THE HEALTH DOLLAR—Here's how our health dollar is spent, says the American Medical Association, using Commerce Department statistics. Health care spending totaled $25.3 billion in 1964, up 7.8 per cent from $23.4 billion spent in 1963.

Ken Boyer May Get The Last Laugh At Cards

By JOE GERGEN

UPI Sports Writer

Ken Boyer is as shrewd at the cards in his home state of Missouri.

The 34-year-old Boyer was told in so many words last year that he was through when the St. Louis Cardinals, for whom he had labored 17 years in both the majors and minors, unloaded him on the personal highest stock of the National League, the New York Mets.

But Boyer was too proud to call it quits without giving himself one more chance, and now he is in a position to "have-haw" at his old employers.

The strapping third baseman, the senior circuit's most valuable player only two years ago, cracked three doubles and drove in three runs Sunday to help the Mets edge the Atlanta Braves 5-4 and soar over the 500 mark for the first time in their league history.

Has Five RBIs

Boyer now has hit safely six times in 19 at-bats and has collected five RBIs in three games.

The St. Louis Cardinals continued to hold onto first place by beating the Houston Astros 5-4, the Los Angeles Dodgers blanked Chicago 5-0, Philadelphia defeated Cincinnati 3-1 and Pittsburgh edged the Cubs 5-4.

In the American League, Cleveland remained undefeated by blanking Boston 5-0, Washington handed Detroit its first defeat 10-4, Chicago abouted Kansas City 5-0 and Baltimore nipped New York 5-4. The California Angels were raised out of 14th place.

Ken Boyer is as shrewd at the cards in his home state of Missouri.

The 34-year-old Boyer was told in so many words last year that he was through when the St. Louis Cardinals, for whom he had labored 17 years in both the majors and minors, unloaded him on the personal highest stock of the National League, the New York Mets.

But Boyer was too proud to call it quits without giving himself one more chance, and now he is in a position to "have-haw" at his old employers.

The strapping third baseman, the senior circuit's most valuable player only two years ago, cracked three doubles and drove in three runs Sunday to help the Mets edge the Atlanta Braves 5-4 and soar over the 500 mark for the first time in their league history.

Has Five RBIs

Boyer now has hit safely six times in 19 at-bats and has collected five RBIs in three games.

The St. Louis Cardinals continued to hold onto first place by beating the Houston Astros 5-4, the Los Angeles Dodgers blanked Chicago 5-0, Philadelphia defeated Cincinnati 3-1 and Pittsburgh edged the Cubs 5-4.

In the American League, Cleveland remained undefeated by blanking Boston 5-0, Washington handed Detroit its first defeat 10-4, Chicago abouted Kansas City 5-0 and Baltimore nipped New York 5-4. The California Angels were raised out of 14th place.

Mats Are Very Important In Picture Exhibit

Mats play an important role in framing and displaying pictures. According to the Picture and Frame Institute they serve two integral functions:

1. A mat separates a very delicate picture from the frame and back-board, making an oval between it and the frame. It serves to strengthen and emphasize the lines and colors of a composition.

2. A matting can make a small picture appear larger and give it importance. Generally, a mat is at least 2 1/2" at top and sides, and 3" on the bottom. This wider bottom margin is to compensate for optical illusion, for a mat the same size at bottom and sides, will actually appear to have a narrower bottom.

Mats can pick up and repeat a predominant color in a picture or harmonize with surrounding room colors. If you're a do-it-yourself fan you can make your own picture mat by following these directions:

1. Measure picture, its frame, and the distance between the two. 2. Place picture on the mat so that top and side margins are the same and the bottom one is wider. 3. Measure the quarter inch in from each corner and mark on the mat. Connect these points with light pencil lines.

4. With a sharp ruler and a metal edge ruler cut through the matting just to edge of marked lines and remove cut part of mat. 5. Place picture straight on mat and fasten with masking tape.

With the picture matted, you are now ready to finish framing. The Institute recommends putting glass into a frame first then the matted picture. Secure mat to frame with headless nails. Use a piece of heavy brown paper the size of the frame and glue it to back. Insert eye screws on the frame, one-fourth of the way from top, and attach picture wire for hanging.

CHAPTER 1

KIRBY McCABE was twenty-four the August day he returned home to Lockport, Ohio. He had toughed, killed, and across the shoulder. His skin was burned an Indian brown, making his hazel eyes seem pale. Tall, lean, and stood on the straightness of the straightness of one who had been outside a horse the greater part of the Civil War.

Five lines were beginning to web the corners of his mouth and eyes. A scar showed along the left side of his forehead. That was where a Comanche buffalo lance had grazed him. He carried a fragment from a Kiowa arrowhead somewhere in his shoulder, and it sometimes gave him pain.

He stepped from the coach of a Baltimore and Ohio train that had brought him from the hospital in St. Louis and stood on the old familiar wooden platform at the depot.

He gazed around, avidly seeking the full rest of this moment. Kirby McCABE was home! Home from the battle!

Around him, the matter of other passengers - who had alighted faded off the sun-drenched platform, heading for horse-drawn cabs, or for the shady side of Market Street, carrying their carpetbags and bundles. The faces of several of them had been familiar. He had known nearly everyone in Lockport, and he knew by sight, if not by name.

But, if they gave him a second glance, it was to frown at his unbecomingly different in manner and dress. No man in those parts carried a neckerchief slung around his throat. Or wore boots that had an alien cut to them. Spanish-moose, they were, those boots, and they bore the scars of having carried heavy spurs. His hat had a rim far wider than was the custom, and its peak was taller. By golly, it had Spanish flavor to it also.

However, his breeches were federal issue. Lockport had seen many like them, worn by men who had come home after Appomattox. This familiar note proved that he had soldiered, not in all eyes he was alien. Lockport was always uneasy and suspicious in the presence of novelty or change.

Appomattox was more than a year in the past. The war was already becoming a memory. Ghosts like this sun-darkened, tall man had no part in Lockport's placid way of life.

Few of Company A had ever returned at all. Those who had come back found that people weren't interested in stories of the deadly drabness of war. What they wanted to hear was the wild adventure of it. Those who had been there - at Shiloh and Chancellorsville, at Gettysburg or in the Wilderness - had little to say that they wanted to hear.

The bell in the courthouse on Main Street boomed the hour. Ten o'clock. Ten o'clock on a peaceful summer day in a town that was shapely. "I guess they figured I wasn't worth keeping," Kirby said. "They thought I was going to -"

His words faded. For Chuck had pushed past him and was continuing on his way down the street.

"To heck!" Kirby muttered, completing what he had started to say. But there was no one to listen.

He was puzzled. And suddenly afraid. He walked on up Market Street. He saw two or three more familiar faces, but their owners pretended they didn't see him.

Lockport's pride was the mansion of Colonel Horace Logan. It stood on high ground, overlooking the town and miles of the peaceful Muskingum River. It was a long, not walk up hill to the mansion but Kirby was driven by a fierce urge. He had waited four years to meet face-to-face the man who had sent twenty-nine comrades to their deaths.

He walked up the flagstone path beneath the stims that tempered the heat of the sun. A gardener who was working in a plot of roses, paused, staring uncertainly.

A stableman emerged from the carriage house, wearing a gun apron and carrying in his hand the sponge with which he had been washing some vehicle. This one started to approach, moving fast, intending to challenge Kirby's right to be there.

Something in Kirby's manner halted him. He remained at a distance, waiting. Kirby noted the wide steps to the white-painted veranda, shaded by hollyhocks.

Somewhere in the big house someone was fingering old scales on a piano. The notes were sweet on the warm air. The front door was wide open for ventilation and he reached inside and twisted the key on the silver bell. The sound echoed in the house.

An elderly woman in a maid's cap and apron appeared on a circular stairway that mounted from the entry hall. Before she could descend, the piano playing ended and a young woman came hurrying from a side room into the hall.

She was Horace Logan's daughter, Nora, young and shapely, with lively amber eyes and rich chestnut-brown hair. There was an assurance in her, the pose of one born to wealth and of a woman who knows the power of her beauty.

"What is it?" she demanded. Then she looked him over a second time and he was sure there had been instant recognition - and apprehension in her.

"To Be Continued Tomorrow!"

NOW YOUR TAXES

closer to paying what people actually end up owing at the end of the year.

For most taxpayers, this will mean either smaller final payments or smaller refunds when taxes come due each spring. The government estimates that 21 million people will now come within $10 of their final tax bill.

The old system required employers to withhold taxes at a flat 14 per cent rate. Under the new graduated system, taxes will be withheld at six different rates — ranging from 14 to 30 per cent — depending on the taxpayer's earnings.

Various Holdings
Wage-earners in middle and upper income brackets will be subject to higher withholding rates. Those in lower brackets will have less withheld because the minimum standard deduction approved by Congress in 1964 has been built into withholding for the first time.

In redesigning withholding, Congress concentrated on cutting underwithholding, aiming the legislation mainly at middle and upper income people who didn't have enough taken out of their pay under the old system.

There will be some reduction in overwithholding, too. But the net effect will be to bring the Treasury $800 million more in 1966 than it would have received with the old system. Without the change, the Treasury would have had to wait until people make their final 1966 tax settlements to get the $800 million.

Dear Abby

Use Your Own Cash — Not Pop's Credit

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: If a 16-year-old girl asked me to give her birth control pills, knowing that I was a "trusted" friend of her parents, I would be damned if I did and damned if I didn't. I would feel compelled to give her the pills, fearing that if I turned her away and she became pregnant, I would be responsible for either (a) an illegitimate baby, (b) a forced marriage, which is usually a miserable one, or, heaven forbid, (c) a botched abortion. I would feel morally obligated to prevent any of the above mentioned tragedies if possible. Please withhold my name, although I am seriously tempted to ask you to print it with a request that no minor girls come to my office for birth control pills. BEVERLY HILLS, M. D., OB. AND GYN.

DEAR ABBY: As a recent medical meeting some doctors said they would not hesitate to give "the pill" and contraceptive advice to any girl capable of becoming pregnant, regardless of parental knowledge or consent. Others said they would give it without parental consent IF the family minister, authorized for the parent, had said that that organization any individual under 21 without the knowledge and consent of his parents or legal guardian. I personally have provided minors (both male and female) with contraceptives, but only after lecturing them extensively on the danger of venereal disease as well as the psychosocial hazards of promiscuity. I admit no regrets. A FAMILY DOCTOR FOR 32 YEARS

DEAR ABBY: Speaking as a physician who respects to the letter the ethics of his profession, I should feel duty-bound to report to the parents all that their daughter, a minor in the eyes of the law, had confided in me. But speaking as a father of a teen-age girl, I would thank God that my child had the good sense to seek the advice and help of a trusted family friend and physician since she couldn't bring herself to come to her mother or me. A BALTIMORE M. D.

DEAR ABBY: About whether the doctor should tell the mother that her young daughter had asked him for birth control pills: What for? If the mother was the kind I wouldn't have gone to the doctor on the sneak in the first place. I wasn't so lucky. I didn't have a mother to go to, and I didn't know a doctor who would see me. I had to face disgrace all alone when I was 15. You can't change human nature. I say they should pass out the pills free to anybody who wants them.

DEAR ABBY: Far as I'm concerned, you, DEAR ABBY, AND the Madison M. D. both missed the point. I would not prescribe birth control pills to an unmarried 16-year-old girl, neither would I prescribe them to a married woman for the simple reason that I think they are still in the experimental stages. No patient of mine will ever be a guinea pig if I can help it.

DEAR ABBY: As a physician and psychiatrist, may I comment in answer to MADISON M. D.: The girl who requested the pills, may really not want them, but rather may be craving for the friendship and advice of someone she can trust. Her confidence should certainly be respected, as few parents are able to sympathetically counsel their teen-age children.

DEAR ABBY: Why are you polling DOCTORS on whether a 16-year-old girl should be given contraceptive devices and information without the knowledge and consent of her parents? It is clearly a LEGAL question. And the answer is an unequivocal NO!
